

> Numerix is the leading analytics institution providing cross-asset solutions for structuring, pre-trade price discovery, trade capture, valuation and risk management for derivatives and structured products. More than 700 financial institutions and 50 partner systems across 25 countries rely on Numerix analytics for speed and accuracy in valuing and managing their structured products and derivatives.

Since its inception in 1996, Numerix has become the widely regarded market standard for pricing, valuation and managing the most sophisticated financial instruments. With offices worldwide – New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Vancouver, London, Paris, Tokyo, Hong Kong, Beijing, Singapore, Seoul, Sydney, Mumbai and Dubai – Numerix brings together unparalleled expertise across all asset classes and engineering disciplines. Our business professionals intimately understand the over-the-counter markets, and our research and development teams – comprising more than 90 PhDs with expertise in theoretical physics, computer science and applied mathematics – respond rapidly to the changing landscape of these vital markets.

Numerix is the only analytics company to support derivatives and structured products across all major asset classes, including: credit, equity, fixed income, cross-currency, foreign exchange, inflation, commodities and hybrids. Delivered on an integrated framework with all the fundamental building blocks to create and build unlimited structures, the sophisticated layered architecture allows for the construction and valuation of the most complex exotic deals.

Numerix alliances are critical to our successful implementation of pricing and risk solutions for our mutual clients. The flexibility of our analytic infrastructure enables most of the world's largest straight-through processing systems to offer Numerix analytics embedded or 'out of the box'. Bloomberg, Misys and Thomson Reuters are a few of the strategic partners currently offering embedded Numerix analytics.
